A Touchstone Energy® Cooperative

No immunity from rising costs

WHILE IT'S NO LONGER cold season, there is an epidemic of inflation and surging costs going around.

I wish I could tell you that the price of electricity has somehow remained immune. Unfortunately, that's not the case, mostly due to factors beyond our control.

As I mentioned in previous columns, the price of critical materials such as transformers, utility poles and cables has skyrocketed over the past five years. Rising interest rates have also increased our borrowing costs for system upgrades.

We are also facing increases in our wholesale power costs. The electric cooperatives in South Carolina do not generate electricity. Rather, we purchase electricity at the wholesale level and distribute it to our members. Roughly 25% of that wholesale power comes from Duke Energy while the rest comes from Santee Cooper. We have seen gradual increases from Duke over the past several years. However, Santee Cooper has emerged from a rate lock period this year and is increasing rates for all its customers, including the state's cooperatives.

As a result, energy consumers throughout South Carolina are bracing for higher power bills. Every time I turn on the news, it seems there's a story about a utility raising electric rates.

It's a testament to the excellent staff and leadership at Fairfield Electric that we've managed to stave off a rate increase for this long.

Keeping the cost of electricity down is a top priority for your cooperative. We have explored every possible avenue to soften the impact of rising energy costs on our members, such as delaying the purchase of fleet vehicles and cutting non-essential expenses.

We also work to lower costs through strategic partnerships with the rest of South Carolina's electric cooperatives.

To ensure we get the best deal on buying wholesale power, we work with our power supplier, Central Electric Power Cooperative, to negotiate the lowest possible energy prices. To obtain discount prices on materials and equipment, we buy in bulk with other co-ops through CEEUS, a cooperative that supplies everything from the rubber gloves our linemen wear to overhead wire and transformers.

We work with the electric cooperatives' economic development organization, the South Carolina Power Team, to recruit industry to our service area. Those businesses bring in new revenue that we use to offset our rising costs. Finally, we protect our members from expensive red tape and government regulation by working with our neighbor cooperatives to fight for better energy policy at the Statehouse and in Congress.

The rising costs we are facing is a significant challenge for your cooperative. We have taken every cost-cutting measure possible and we will continue to operate as efficiently as possible. We have also deferred revenue into reserve funds to offset these increasing costs. We are currently working with a rate consultant who is performing a comprehensive analysis of our expenses and our current rate structures.

I feel strongly that as members of Fairfield Electric, you deserve to know the challenges your co-op is facing. When we must make tough decisions, it's important you understand why.

Together, we will keep our electric cooperative healthy so that we can keep delivering the dependable, affordable power you deserve.

BRUCE G. BACON

Chief Executive Officer
